

Union Avenue, N.E.

157 Union N.E. The architectural style may best be described as "vernacular," which means ordinary or common. This 2-story, 2-bedroom house, built around 1888, was meticulously restored by George Beckon in 1993. Divided into two units in the early 1930's, this modest home suffered numerous remodelings over the years, the most offensive of which was the paneling of the entire interior--over the fireplace, doorways, and all. There is fine detail in the living room, dining room, and parlor. The remains of a pecan mantle were found around the hidden living room fireplace during the 1990's remodeling. The woodwork and massive pocket door are notable. Robert and Pam Mueller are the 1995 owners.
